Your Building Doesn't Win the Family — Your Story Does: A Narrative Architecture Framework for Assisted Living Communities

Ceu's: 1.5 SC CE broker 1.5 NAB

In today's assisted living market, the race for occupancy has become a race to sameness. Same brochures. Same amenity highlights. Same language. Same website. The community with the fanciest building often wins by default. But here's what's true: your stories are already in the building. They're in your residents — their lives, their journeys, their moments of joy and belonging. They're in your staff — their sacrifices, their relationships, their reason for showing up every single shift. They're in the families — their fears, their relief, their profound gratitude. These are the assets no other community can replicate. They are sitting largely uncaptured and untold. This session introduces the Narrative Architecture Framework — a practical, repeatable system for identifying, capturing, and distributing the authentic human stories that live inside your community. Drawing on the Musey Storytelling Structure and the StoryBrand framework, attendees will learn how to transform raw human moments into strategic narrative assets that build trust with prospective families faster, reduce decision-making hesitation, and help families choose your community — even over a competitor with more amenities and a newer building. Because what families ultimately want is not a fancy building. They want evidence that someone will love their person. Story is that evidence.

Culture They Can Feel: Elevating the Resident Experience Every Day

Ceu's: 1.5 SC CE broker 1.5 NAB

In today's assisted living environment, a strong culture is essential to resident satisfaction, employee engagement, and organizational success. This interactive session explores practical strategies for building a resident-centered culture that employees embrace, families trust, and residents truly experience. Attendees will leave with actionable ideas to strengthen team ownership, enhance everyday experiences, and create a community where compassion, connection, and excellence thrive.
